

PRESS RELEASE

Integral provides SaaS FX technology solution to Capital.com

PALO ALTO (09 November 2022) – Integral, (www.integral.com), a leading technology provider to the financial markets, announced today that global brokerage firm Capital.com has selected Integral’s cloud-based FX workflow automation technology, IntegralFX, to offer bank-grade pricing to their retail trader customer base.

The comprehensive end-to-end eFX trading and workflow solution has been specifically built for the broker community, demonstrating Integral’s commitment to democratising financial technology and making it more accessible and efficient to the broker segment operating in the fast-moving online trading and investing space. Integral’s SaaS technology, available at a fixed subscription cost, enables platforms like Capital.com to focus on growing their business without worrying about additional brokerage fees.

Capital.com will benefit from connectivity to Integral’s low-latency market data, greater access to multi-asset liquidity sources, and advanced price distribution functionality to deliver a superior service to their clients.

Harpal Sandhu, CEO, Integral, commented: “Our cloud-based SaaS offering has been built with our customers in mind and enables them to grow and outperform their competition. We’re very pleased to be working with Capital.com and further expanding our client base in the broker segment.”

Christoforos Soutzis, Head of Operations, Capital.com added: “We are delighted to work with Integral and provide our clients with live, real-time FX and metals pricing to help them make more informed trading decisions. This partnership affirms Capital.com’s commitment to combine state-of-the-art technology with timely data and insights to help our clients trade and invest with ease and confidence.”
